

TherapIA

Full Name: Rodrigo Pinto

Date of Birth: 11-10-2004

Occupation: student

Nationality: Portuguesa

General Evaluation: The client appears to be generally happy and emotionally stable, but there is an undertone of possible isolation. The absence of chat interactions suggests they may be feeling somewhat disconnected despite their positive sentiments.

Last Update: 1740266810580

Big Five Personality Traits

Neuroticism: 25 - A low neuroticism score implies that the client is experiencing minimal emotional instability or anxieties, aligning with their report of happiness.

Extraversion: 40 - The client's score indicates a moderate level of extraversion, suggesting they enjoy positive emotions but may not seek social engagement regularly, hence the absence of chats.

Openness: 50 - The client's openness score indicates a balanced acceptance of experiences and emotions, allowing for emotional expression without extreme reactions.

Agreeableness: 75 - The high level of agreeableness is reflected in the client's focus on emotional well-being and positivity, indicating a warm and cooperative nature.

Conscientiousness: 60 - The score suggests that the client is reasonably organized and responsible, likely maintaining their emotional awareness despite the lack of ongoing support.

Enneagram Type

Type: The Peacemaker

Description: The client displays a tendency towards emotional well-being and a generally positive outlook, as indicated by their diary entry reflecting happiness. This suggests a desire for harmony and peace, typical of the Peacemaker type. Additionally, the absence of conflict or distress in their expressed thoughts may indicate a low level of challenge from other types, but subtle influences from The Helper could be observed in their emotional focus on well-being.
